K-F Financial Pryamid Amazes Senate Inquiry

(The following article by Herman A. Lowe, Washington feature writer for the Philadelphia Inquirer, appeared in the June 4 issue of the Inquirer and is reprinted in the Bristol Courier by special permission.)

BY HERMAN A. LOWE

Washington, June 4. Pennsylvania's Jim Duff is a member of a subcommittee of the Senate Armed Services Committee which has begun to probe Air Force procurement policies. Among the matters being looked into is the C-119 cargo plane program, with particular attention to the contract awarded to Kaiser-Frazer at Willow Run, Mich.

In the course of the investigation, the Senators may look into some of the financial deals whereby Kaiser-Frazer purchased Willow Run, got its working capital, prepared to handle its aircraft contract, and then bought Willys-Overland.

If the committee does go into this, it will be taking the advice of Delaware's one-man investigating team Senator John J. Williams, who has already lifted the curtain on some of this amazing financial pyramid in which nearly all money involved comes from the American taxpayer.

Here's the story as Senator Williams has unravelled it with information from the General Services Administration, Reconstruction Finance Corp., and Federal Reserve System.

Some time after the end of World War II, the great Willow Run bomber plant, which had cost the Government nearly $43,000,000, was put up for sale as surplus property. On Dec. 1, 1948, it was sold to Kaiser-Frazer for $15,100,000.

Under the terms of the deal, Kaiser paid 10 percent down and General Services Administration (successor to War Assets Administration) took back the remaining $13,590,000 as a 20-year first mortgage to be amortized at the rate of $679,500 annually.

But RFC insisted that it must have the first mortgage on the plant. So General Services Administration (they ought to call it "generous" services) obligingly

Delaware Valley Tops Job Opportunity List; Grad Outlook Bright

More Jobs Open Here Than "Anywhere in The World"

HARRISBURG, June 6 — (INS) — A bright picture was painted today by the State Bureau of Employment Security for high school and college graduates entering Pennsylvania's labor market.

In general, personnel managers in private industry, defense plants and other businesses will have the welcome mat out for youthful job seekers.

The bureau estimates 65,000 students will be graduated from public, private and parochial secondary schools this June. Approximately 79,000 of the total will seek permanent employment; about 10,000 will serve in the armed forces; more than 15,000 will enter college in the Autumn.

"Inasmuch as many graduates will be under 18 years of age and prohibited by law from employment in certain industries," the bureau said, "Many graduates will take temporary jobs in varying types of industry not classified as hazardous until Fall."

Surveys by the State Labor and Industry Department reveal shortages in commercial and sales fields; trades, services and marine occupations; and technical and professional lines.

Most technically trained college graduates, such as engineers and chemists, have difficulty only in choosing the best of many offers by industry.

"Unskilled high school graduates are not fitted for employment in all jobs that are open," the bureau said, "but there are about 40 types of occupational niches they can fill."

Lower Bucks Hospital Nears Completion Here

Fund Committee Allocates Distribution Of Funds

Lower Bucks County Hospital campaign executive committee chairman, Harold F. Hunter, reports that the purpose of the campaign executive committee is to coordinate and guide all campaign divisions handling the $1,000,000 solicitation.

"The campaign executive committee is asking volunteer leadership to work without delay and follow a predetermined time schedule that will enable this hospital area to meet its goal by the end of July," said Mr. Hunter.

Campaign leadership was praised by Mr. Hunter. He said, "Citizens of this community should know that although solicitations have not been launched, volunteers have been active for many weeks. Untold hours have already been given and more time will be expended during the next two months."

"It is a heartwarming experience to work with this spirited group. Those who are giving their time and energy to this campaign are determined that the Lower Bucks County Hospital, now under construction, will become a life-saving reality in the near future."

Members of the committee serving with Mr. Hunter are: Alfred E. Lewis, Warren A. Jennings, John H. Spadacino, Mrs. Reba C. Goebig, Louis Dries, I. J. Hetherington, Sr., and W. B. McCluer.

Thank You' Notes Mailed To 200 County Firms

Nearly two hundred firms and plants in Bucks County are being mailed thank-you posters by the Bucks County United Services Federation.

Accompanied by a letter signed by Clyde J. Waterman, president of the Federation, the posters express thanks for contributions made last year by various executives and employees to the Bucks County Community Chest drive.

Waterman's letter, imprinted on the poster, says, in part, "first Community Chest Campaign has resulted in an amount which made it possible to provide member agencies with more money than they raised in separate campaigns the previous year."

The poster is illustrated with four pictures and also carries a listing of the agencies which belong to the Chest.

Waterman has asked that the poster be displayed on a bulletin board in each factory or firm so that all employees may see it and realize the Federation is grateful for their efforts.

Delaware Valley Tops Job Opportunity List; Grad Outlook Bright

More Jobs Open Here Than "Anywhere in The World"

HARRISBURG, June 6 — (INS) — A bright picture was painted today by the State Bureau of Employment Security for high school and college graduates entering Pennsylvania's labor market.

In general, personnel managers in private industry, defense plants and other businesses will have the welcome mat out for youthful job seekers.

The bureau estimates $5,000 students will be graduated from public, private and parochial secondary schools this June. Approximately 70,000 of the total will seek permanent employment; about 10,000 will serve in the armed forces; more than 15,000 will enter college in the Autumn.

"Inasmuch as many graduates will be under 18 years of age and prohibited by law from employment in certain industries," the bureau said, "Many graduates will take temporary jobs in varying types of industry not classified as hazardous until Fall."

Surveys by the State Labor and Industry Department reveal shortages in commercial and sales fields; trades, services and marine occupations; and technical and professional lines.

Most technically trained college graduates, such as engineers and chemists, have difficulty only in choosing the best of many offers by industry.

"Unskilled high school graduates are not fitted for employment in all jobs that are open," the bureau said, "but there are about 40 types of occupational niches they can fill."

VA Appraisal Chief Warns Builders of GI Housing

Hits "Turnover" in Homes At County Realtors' Meeting

DOYLESTOWN, June 6 — Warning that builders should have their plans and specifications approved before they start their building operation, Charles Flanagan, chief of the appraisal section of the Veterans Administration, Phila., last evening at a meeting of the Bucks County Board of Realtors here, said: "A builder of a GI house should know what he is doing before the operation of building gets underway."

Speaking to 55 men and women, realtors and their friends at the Doylestown Inn, Chief Flanagan emphasized the fact that any builder, after December, 1952, if the house is not FHA or VA approved, before the construction starts, will not qualify for a GI Loan.

Flanagan also deplored the quick turnover in GI built homes. "The intention of the G. I. Bill of Rights

VICTORY FOR CAPTIVES

The anonymous and unsung originator of the idea of equipping buses in the big cities with radios may have considered himself a public benefactor. Bus rides can be boring; why not a little free entertainment to help pass the time? He may have been surprised by the acrimonious opposition of some members of the bus-riding public.

But opposition there was. Some people said they had to ride the buses, but didn't want to be forced to listen to the radio as members of a "captive audience." Tastes vary. Football games, comedians, prize fights, church services and news commentators are one man's meat and another man's poison.

Besides, there are commercials, which always seem to be shouted some decibels louder than the rest of the program. Thus it will be seen that protests of the "captive audience" were not baseless. But the U. S. Supreme Court eventually ruled that radios on public conveyances were not among the hazards and restrictions from which the Bill of Rights safeguards the populace. This simply was not, the justices said, the kind of thing that the government ought to stick its nose into.

The court's wisdom is now vindicated. Transit radio is on the way out, apparently, and captive audiences are getting their freedom back. In nine cities across the country transit radio has been abandoned, and in two others its demise has already been agreed on. It has once more been demonstrated that the force of public opinion can accomplish more than lawsuits.

GALA FAREWELL

In many respects 1893 was a memorable year. The Chicago World's Fair, officially the Columbian Exposition, opened a year late to celebrate the 400th anniversary of the discovery of America.

Charles E. Duryea was jaunting about Springfield, Mass., in his one-cylinder gasoline buggy. Many prognosticators shook their heads sadly when Charles Frohman, a producer who made a great impress on his times, opened the magnificent Empire Theater "way up town" at 40th Street in New York City.

At the age of 60, still profitable and now the oldest legitimate theater in New York, it has now been taken over by wrecking crews to be replaced by an office building.

The passing of the Empire couldn't be permitted to go unmarked. It was not, however, by a lodge of sorrow, but by a gala benefit performance for which prices ranged up to $50 a seat gladly paid by devoted theatergoers.

Cornelia Otis Skinner was, of course, an excellent mistress of ceremonies, in which many took part and to which actors at a distance sent messages. It was a gay night.

K-F Financial Pyramid

agreed to subordinate its claim into a second mortgage on the property. This would become virtually worthless in case the Kaiser operation should cave in.

Kaiser-Frazer made two annual payments of $679,500 in 1949 and 1950 to General Services. Then it obtained a moratorium so that it wouldn't have to pay another installment until December, 1954.

But that's not all the Kaiser-Frazer financial ledgerman at Willow Run, according to Senator Williams.

Kaiser-Frazer, which already had a $34,400,000 loan from RFC (the taxpayers' money, of course) went back to that agency and got two more loans in rapid succession—the first for $10,000,000 and the second for $25,000,000.

Thus, there were outstanding $69,400,000 in RFC loans to Kaiser-Frazer who, by now, had paid back a couple of millions to the Government in interest and principal on the real estate purchase.

The collateral was the small Kaiser-Frazer equity in Willow Run plus $20,000,000 in Government bonds posted by the Henry J. Kaiser Corp., a separate family firm owned by Henry J. Kaiser.

At this point, Kaiser-Frazer got a contract from the Air Force to build some of those C-119 cargo planes which the Flanders-Bridges Committee is probing.

The corporation borrowed $25,000,000 in revolving capital from banks, the loans being supported by the Department of the Air Force. With this cash, Kaiser-Frazer paid off $15,000,000 of its Government loans and got the $20,000,000 of gilt-edged Government bonds returned to the Henry J. Kaiser Corp.

As Senator Williams sees it, the Government lost $5,000,000 of solid backing for its loans to Kaiser. What's more Kaiser-Frazer also got a moratorium on repayment of the first $34,000,000 RFC loan.

The Government had some other collateral on its loans, the common stock of the Kaiser Mfg. Co., a subsidiary of Kaiser-Frazer. When the company made its deal to buy Willys-Overland, the RFC politely relinquished its claim on this stock so that the Kaiser people could use it as part of the collateral to obtain a private bank loan for $20,000,000 for the purchase deal.

Says Senator Williams: "The Reconstruction Finance Corp. furthermore graciously agreed that the merged corporation (Kaiser - Frazer - Willys - Overland) through sinking fund arrangements could earmark their earnings not for the payment of their obligations to the Federal Government but rather toward the repayment of their outside obligations and various stockholders."

Nor is this all the Kaiser loans from the Government in connection with Willow-Run and the plane contracts.

In 1951, reports the Federal Reserve System, a Kaiser enterprise got a V-loan for $25,000,000 from the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco, under guarantee of the Air Force. Six months later it obtained another V-loan for $15,000,000. Subsequently it got other V-loans aggregating $15,500,000.

Of these various Government loans—all having to do with Willow Run—there is still outstanding about $89,000,000. This is in addition to earlier, outstanding loans Henry Kaiser got from Uncle Sam.

Seems like nice business for those who can get it.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

'Ike' and The Tax Fight

WASHINGTON, June 6.

In the matter of taxes, it is now perfectly clear that, despite the really great economies which the Eisenhower Administration has made in governmental costs all down the line, there will be no reduction in taxes on individuals or corporations in the near future.

It is true that in the Republican platform and in the Eisenhower campaign promises of early tax reduction and budget balance were held out to the people. It is true that if these promises are not carried out many persons will be deeply disappointed. It is also true that no one will be more disappointed than Mr. Eisenhower. It is also true that his enemies will denounce him for failure to make good on party and personal pledges. We may be sure they will make the well-known welkin ring on this charge. However, there is reason to think that politically this will not be too effective.

First, because Mr. Eisenhower has succeeded in pretty thoroughly getting the facts to the country; second, because the facts are such as to justify his failure and fortify his program. They can be summed up as follows: (1) That the Federal financial mess which he inherited from the Truman Administration is very much worse than he or anyone else had suspected; (2) that it would seriously damage the national interests to attempt to carry out his promises this year; (3) that national security and national solvency are linked and must come first.

Accepting these points as true—and (except to the professional Democratic partisans) they seem indisputable, there is just one thing that could weaken the Eisenhower position. That is a failure to eliminate waste throughout the whole governmental structure and insist upon the most rigid economy. If he failed in that it would be impossible to justify his failure to reduce taxes and balance the budget. But most decidedly he has not failed in that. On the contrary, the huge sum of $8,500,000,000 has been carved out of the Truman budget. Three and a half billion of this has come out of domestic expenditures. Not a single department or division has escaped a heavy cut. But $5,100,000,000 has come out of defense appropriations.

Most of this comes out of the Air Force and there will be deep feeling and a long and lusty protest. Nor is the strength of the protestants in Congress to be discounted. Nevertheless, in the end it seems likely that Congress and the country will accept the President's judgment that this cut will not lessen our air strength. As an acknowledged military expert he insists its scheduled increase will be maintained and asserts that if this were not so he would not advocate it. It would seem worth while to take his word about both—and most persons will. That the public sentiment behind General Ike when he was elected has not diminished since is generally admitted and certainly fully attested by the polls. This means that, notwithstanding opposition to his tax and economy program by some powerful members of his own party, it will go through.

Of course there will be a fight, but it is interesting to note that the President has the support not only of Senator Taft, Republican, but of Senator Byrd, Democrat. In brief, his program appeals to the conservatives in both parties—and the conservatives are in a decided majority in this Congress. It also should be noted that the CIO, which violently opposed his election, has indicated support of his fiscal plans. This probably will not help the Administration greatly as the CIO domination of senators has diminished in the past few years. They can't deliver as many votes as they once claimed but their position at this time is significant in that it is the first sign from it of anything except unremitting Eisenhower hostility.

The real opposition will come from the so-called "liberals" plus Old Guard Republicans, who think the "long view" is a lot of nonsense and that the thing to do is to give the voters a tax reduction just before an election regardless of the budget or anything else. To these must be added regular Democrats, like Senator Russell, of Georgia, plus the big business men who supported Eisenhower but now think the most vital thing in the world is to get rid of the excess-profits tax. As to that Mr. Eisenhower is not going to yield—at least at this session.

And to the opponents of the fiscal program probably also should be added Mr. Truman, who has indicated that soon or late he intends to "explode." When he left the White House, Mr. Truman gave every indication of believing he really was a very big man and that those who criticized him were villains, fools or both. His friends report that in the past few months this feeling has not diminished. He is convinced that he has a very great following in the country, and so far as the Democratic party is concerned, while Mr. Stevenson may be the titular leader he is the real one. He is further said to be deeply resentful at the disposition of President Eisenhower to blame his inability to carry out his promises upon the "mess" he inherited. The belief is pretty general that he will "explode" as advertised, but few think it will be an atomic explosion.

VICTORY FOR CAPTIVES

The anonymous and unsmiling originator of the idea of equipping buses in the big cities with radios may have considered himself a public benefactor. Bus rides can be boring; why not a little free entertainment to help pass the time? He may have been surprised by the acrimonious opposition of some members of the bus-riding public.

But opposition there was. Some people said they had to ride the buses, but didn't want to be forced to listen to the radio as members of a "captive audience." Tastes vary. Football games, comedians, prize fights, church services and news commentators are one man's meat and another man's poison.

Besides, there are commercials, which always seem to be shouted some decibels louder than the rest of the program. Thus it will be seen that protests of the "captive audience" were not baseless.

But the U. S. Supreme Court eventually ruled that radios on public conveyances were not among the hazards and restrictions from which the Bill of Rights safeguards the populace. This simply was not, the justices said, the kind of thing that the government ought to stick its nose into.

The court's wisdom is now vindicated. Transit radio is on the way out, apparently, and captive audiences are getting their freedom back. In nine cities across the country transit radio has been abandoned, and in two others its demise has already been agreed on. It has once more been demonstrated that the force of public opinion can accomplish more than lawsuits.

GALA FAREWELL

In many respects 1893 was a memorable year. The Chicago World's Fair, officially the Columbian Exposition, opened a year late to celebrate the 400th anniversary of the discovery of America.

Charles E. Duryea was jaunting about Springfield, Mass., in his one-cylinder gasoline buggy. Many prognosticators shook their heads sadly when Charles Frohman, a producer who made a great impression on his times, opened the magnificent Empire Theater "way up town" at 40th Street in New York City.

At the age of 60, still profitable and now the oldest legitimate theater in New York, it has now been taken over by wrecking crews to be replaced by an office building.

The passing of the Empire couldn't be permitted to go unmarked. It was not, however, by a lodge of sorrow, but by a gala benefit performance for which prices ranged up to $50 a seat gladly paid by devoted theatergoers.

Cornelia Otis Skinner was, of course, an excellent mistress of ceremonies, in which many took part and to which actors at a distance sent messages. It was a gay night.

K-F Financial Pyramid

agreed to subordinate its claim into a second mortgage on the property. This would become virtually worthless in case the Kaiser operation should cave in.

Kaiser-Frazer made two annual payments of $679,500 in 1949 and 1950 to General Services. Then it obtained a moratorium so that it wouldn't have to pay another installment until December, 1954.

But that's not all the Kaiser-Frazer financial ledgerman at Willow Run, according to Senator Williams.

Kaiser-Frazer, which already had a $34,400,000 loan from RFC (the taxpayers' money, of course) went back to that agency and got two more loans in rapid succession—the first for $10,000,000 and the second for $25,000,000.

Thus, there were outstanding $69,400,000 in RFC loans to Kaiser-Frazer who, by now, had paid back a couple of millions to the Government in interest and principal on the real estate purchase.

The collateral was the small Kaiser-Frazer equity in Willow Run plus $20,000,000 in Government bonds posted by the Henry J. Kaiser Corp., a separate family firm owned by Henry J. Kaiser.

At this point, Kaiser-Frazer got a contract from the Air Force to build some of those C-119 cargo planes which the Flanders-Bridges Committee is probing.

The corporation borrowed $25,000,000 in revolving capital from banks, the loans being supported by the Department of the Air Force. With this cash, Kaiser-Frazer paid off $15,000,000 of its Government loans and got the $20,000,000 of gilt-edged Government bonds returned to the Henry J. Kaiser Corp.

As Senator Williams sees it, the Government lost $5,000,000 of solid backing for its loans to Kaiser. What's more Kaiser-Frazer also got a moratorium on repayment of the first $34,000,000 RFC loan.

The Government had some other collateral on its loans, the common stock of the Kaiser Mfg. Co., a subsidiary of Kaiser-Frazer. When the company made its deal to buy Willys-Overland, the RFC politely relinquished its claim on this stock so that the Kaiser people could use it as part of the collateral to obtain a private bank loan for $20,000,000 for the purchase deal.

Says Senator Williams: "The Reconstruction Finance Corp. furthermore graciously agreed that the merged corporation (Kaiser - Frazer - Willys - Overland) through sinking fund arrangements could earmark their earnings not for the payment of their obligations to the Federal Government but rather toward the repayment of their outside obligations and various stockholders."

Nor is this all the Kaiser loans from the Government in connection with Willow-Run and the plane contracts.

In 1951, reports the Federal Reserve System, a Kaiser enterprise got a V-loan for $25,000,000 from the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco, under guarantee of the Air Force. Six months later it obtained another V-loan for $15,000,000. Subsequently it got other V-loans aggregating $15,500,000.

Of these various Government loans—all having to do with Willow Run—there is still outstanding about $89,000,000. This is in addition to earlier, outstanding loans Henry Kaiser got from Uncle Sam.

Seems like nice business for those who can get it.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT
'Ike' and The Tax Fight

WASHINGTON, June 6.

In the matter of taxes, it is now perfectly clear that, despite the really great economies which the Eisenhower Administration has made in governmental costs all down the line, there will be no reduction in taxes on individuals or corporations this year. Nor will the budget be balanced. These things, along with the reasons therefor, have been made plain by the President.

It is true that in the Republican platform and in the Eisenhower campaign promises of early tax reduction and budget balance were held out to the people. It is true that if these promises are not carried out many persons will be deeply disappointed. It is also true that no one will be more disappointed than Mr. Eisenhower. It is also true that his enemies will denounce him for failure to make good on party and personal pledges. We may be sure they will make the well-known welkin ring on this charge. However, there is reason to think that politically this will not be too effective.

First, because Mr. Eisenhower has succeeded in pretty thoroughly getting the facts to the country; second, because the facts are such as to justify his failure and fortify his program. They can be summed up as follows: (1) That the Federal financial mess which he inherited from the Truman Administration is very much worse than he or anyone else had suspected; (2) that it would seriously damage the national interests to attempt to carry out his promises this year; (3) that national security and national solvency are linked and must come first.

Accepting these points as true—and (except to the professional Democratic partisans) they seem indisputable, there is just one thing that could weaken the Eisenhower position. That is a failure to eliminate waste throughout the whole governmental structure and insist upon the most rigid economy. If he failed in that it would be impossible to justify his failure to reduce taxes and balance the budget. But most decidedly he has not failed in that. On the contrary, the huge sum of $8,500,000,000 has been carved out of the Truman budget. Three and a half billion of this has come out of domestic expenditures. Not a single department or division has escaped a heavy cut. But $5,100,000,000 has come out of defense appropriations.

Most of this comes out of the Air Force and there will be deep feeling and a long and lusty protest. Nor is the strength of the protestants in Congress to be discounted. Nevertheless, in the end it seems likely that Congress and the country will accept the President's judgment that this cut will not lessen our air strength. As an acknowledged military expert he insists its scheduled increase will be maintained and asserts that if this were not so he would not advocate it. It would seem worth while to take his word about both—and most persons will. That the public sentiment behind General Ike when he was elected has not diminished since is generally admitted and certainly fully attested by the polls. This means that, notwithstanding opposition to his tax and economy program by some powerful members of his own party, it will go through.

Of course there will be a fight, but it is interesting to note that the President has the support not only of Senator Taft, Republican, but of Senator Byrd, Democrat. In brief, his program appeals to the conservatives in both parties—and the conservatives are in a decided majority in this Congress. It also should be noted that the CIO, which violently opposed his election, has indicated support of his fiscal plans. This probably will not help the Administration greatly as the CIO domination of senators has diminished in the past few years. They can't deliver as many votes as they once claimed but their position at this time is significant in that it is the first sign from it of anything except unremitting Eisenhower hostility.

The real opposition will come from the so-called "liberals" plus Old Guard Republicans, who think the "long view" is a lot of nonsense and that the things to do is to give the voters a tax reduction just before an election regardless of the budget or anything else. To these must be added regular Democrats, like Senator Russell of Georgia, plus the big business men who supported Eisenhower but now think the most vital thing in the world is to get rid of the excess-profits tax. As to that Mr. Eisenhower is not going to yield—at least at this session.

As to the opponents of the fiscal program probably also should be added Mr. Truman, who has indicated that soon or late he intends to "explode." When he left the White House, Mr. Truman gave every indication of believing he really was a very big man and that those who criticized him were villains, fools or both. His friends report that in the past few months this feeling has not diminished. He is convinced that he has a very great following in the country, and so far as the Democratic party is concerned, while Mr. Stevenson may be the titular leader he is the real one. He is further said to be deeply resentful at the disposition of President Eisenhower to blame his inability to carry out his promises upon the "mess" he inherited. The belief is pretty general that he will "explode" as advertised, but few think it will be an atomic explosion.

NEW HOUSING TRENDS

THIS PRIZE-WINNING HOUSE is built of lightweight, painted concrete block on slab flooring. It has a slightly-pitched, almost flat roof, aluminum-sash casement windows and aluminum doors. The front of the house faces away from the street, thus assuring privacy.

By JOAN O'SULLIVAN

BUILDERS are planning homes from the inside out. The emphasis is on a floor plan that meets the needs of the modest-income family with two, three or four children.

Typical of this trend, is the home shown today. It was originally built in California, where it sold for $12,000 on a 60 x 100 foot lot. The design received an award from the National Association of Home Builders. Thanks to a new program of the association, buyers throughout the country will be offered houses that incorporate many, if not all, the features of this prize-winner. The price, of course will vary considerably, depending on the cost of land, labor and materials in the area where the dwelling is erected.

Indoor-Outdoor Living

The house has three big bedrooms, which are nearly equal in size. A spacious living room flows out to a walled terrace and makes for indoor-outdoor living. There's a fully equipped kitchen, a dining area, two baths and a laundry, which is adjacent to both the kitchen and third bedroom. All these features comprise 1,176 square feet of floor space.

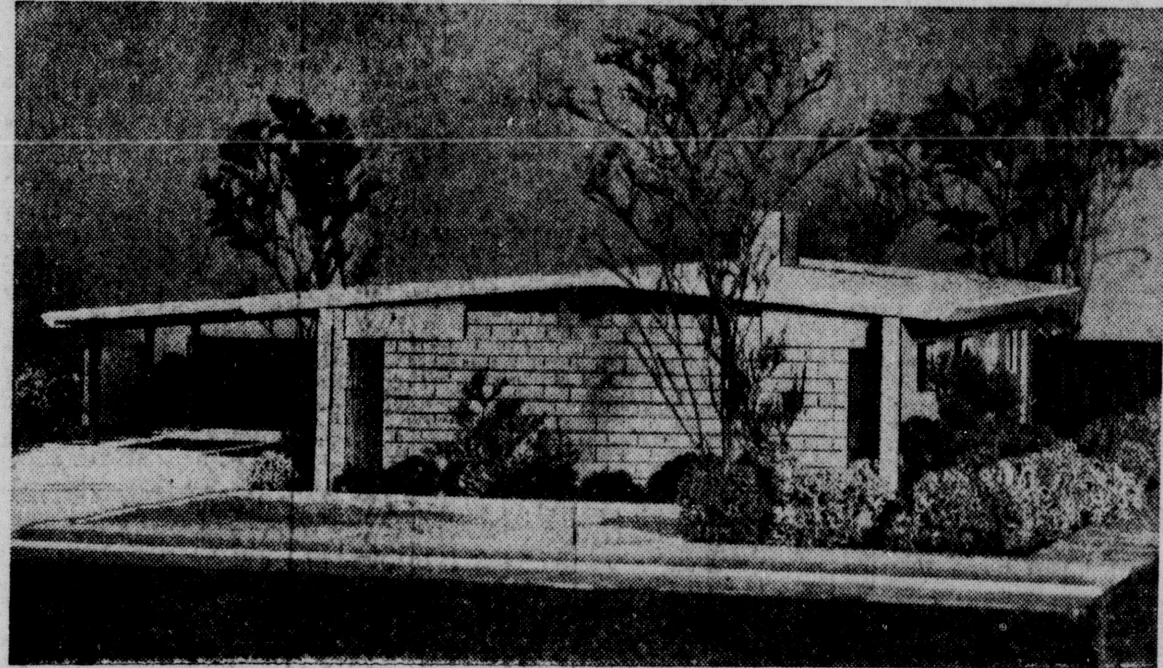

The design includes a carport. Plans also provide a garage, if desired. This space might also be used for a hobby shop or extra storage room.

The modern fireplace, supplementing a forced air heating system, is located to serve both living and dining areas. These are casually separated from the kitchen by a built-in breakfast and serving bar.

Open-Planned Layout

The layout of this prize-winning home is the result of a careful study of family traffic patterns. The passage from the kitchen door to the bath and adjoining bedroom is designed as a runway for the children, which will prevent muddy feet from tracking up the living room. The passage also saves steps for the homemaker, giving her easy access from her kitchen workroom to any part of the house.

The bedrooms are located well away from the living room and terrace areas, where most household activity centers. This feature of the plan gives each member of the family privacy for his or her particular hobby or work.

THIS VIEW SHOWS the rear of the dwelling, which has two bedrooms. At left, is the carport. Plans also provide for a garage, which can be erected next to the carport and used as a hobby or storage area.

A DROP LEAF TABLE takes up little space and enables the family to use most of the dining area for their living room furnishings.

Industrial Coffee Breaks Seen Gaining in Popularity

NEW YORK, (INS) — Industrial coffee breaks are now a regular practice with more than half of the country's workers.

In a recently completed survey by Psychological Corporation, over 54% of the nation's employed persons reported that coffee is now available to them during working hours, compared with some 49% in 1950.

The survey investigated the coffee drinking habits of 8,000 people throughout the United States. The biggest gains in on-the-job consumption of coffee during the past two years were chalked up by office and store employees, the study disclosed. Coffee drinking at office breaks, for example, climbed 33.3% since 1950. The store increase during the same period was 27.8%.

The increase for all workers was 19.3%. This breaks down to a rate of .37 cups of coffee per person a day, compared with only .20 in 1950, a jump of more than 80%.

NEW HOUSING TRENDS

THIS PRIZE-WINNING HOUSE is built of lightweight, painted concrete block on slab flooring. It has a slightly-pitched, almost flat roof, aluminum-sash casement windows and aluminum doors. The front of the house faces away from the street, thus assuring privacy.

By JOAN O'SULLIVAN

BUILDERS are planning homes from the inside out. The emphasis is on a floor plan that meets the needs of the modest-income family with two, three or four children. Typical of this trend, is the home shown today. It was originally built in California, where it sold for $12,000 on a 60 x 100 foot lot. The design received an award from the National Association of Home Builders. Thanks to a new program of the association, buyers throughout the country will be offered houses that incorporate many, if not all, the features of this prize-winner. The price, of course will vary considerably, depending on the cost of land, labor and materials in the area where the dwelling is erected.

Indoor-Outdoor Living

The house has three big bedrooms, which are nearly equal in size. A spacious living room flows out to a walled terrace and makes for indoor-outdoor living. There's a fully equipped kitchen, a dining area, two baths and a laundry, which is adjacent to both the kitchen and third bedroom. All these features comprise 1,176 square feet of floor space.

The design includes a carport. Plans also provide a garage, if desired. This space might also be used for a hobby shop or extra storage room.

The modern fireplace, supplementing a forced air heating system, is located to serve both living and dining areas. These are casually separated from the kitchen by a built-in breakfast and serving bar.

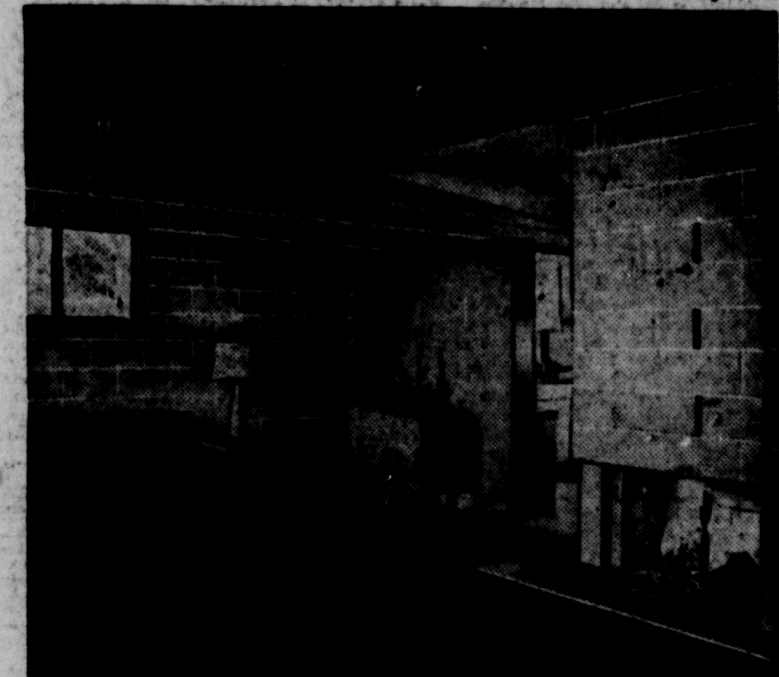

Open-Planned Layout

The layout of this prize-winning home is the result of a careful study of family traffic patterns. The passage from the kitchen door to the bath and adjoining bedroom is designed as a runway for the children, which will prevent muddy feet from tracking up the living room. The passage also saves steps for the homemaker, giving her easy access from her kitchen workroom to any part of the house.

The bedrooms are located well away from the living room and terrace areas, where most household activity centers. This feature of the plan gives each member of the family privacy for his or her particular hobby or work.

THIS VIEW SHOWS the rear of the dwelling, which has two bedrooms. At left, is the carport. Plans also provide for a garage, which can be erected next to the carport and used as a hobby or storage area.

FLOOD PROTECTION

NEW YORK — (INS) — Steel and concrete mattresses that are now protecting the banks of the Mississippi River against erosion may be a key to the prevention of flood disasters such as those that recently ravaged Great Britain and the Low Countries. The fight to keep the lower Mississippi from chewing away too much real estate during flood season has resulted in some of the most unusual river control techniques the world has ever seen, according to Steelways, magazine of American Iron and Steel Institute.

than any other similar areas in the world, according to the bureau. In the Easton-Allentown-Bethlehem labor market, an estimated 3,500 high school and college graduates should have little difficulty securing employment. The bureau said clerical, service and sales workers are needed immediately while many technical positions are waiting for skilled and apprentice persons.

In Harrisburg, many of the 2,000 graduates will land jobs in construction, railroads and non-manufacturing industries. The bureau reported approximately 1,650 persons are needed to bring employment up to the required strength in the area. At Scranton, job opportunities for graduates are good for applicants with abilities to match job requirements. Openings exist for clerks, stenographers, shipping clerks, bookkeepers, salesmen, machinists and power machine operators in textile and shoe industries.

In Erie there should be numerous openings for high school graduates. A heavy demand exists for draftsmen, typists, stenographers, welders, tool makers and machine tool operators, according to the bureau.

In the Greater Pittsburgh Area, about 5,000 graduates will find employment in about 200 different occupations.

At the Johnstown labor market, the job opportunities range from "fair to good" the bureau reports. Employers need about 2,900 persons to fill vacancies. About 1,700 graduates are expected to find employment in steel plants with others going into retail trade and the service industries.

Travel Club Enjoys Program of Music

The Travel Club home took on a festive air yesterday afternoon, when at the final meeting for the season for The Travel Club practically the entire period was given over to an outstanding program of musical numbers, with two guest artists appearing; the showing of color motion picture; and a social period during which the hostesses served refreshments.

Mrs. John A. Moyer, chairman of the division of music, presented to members and guests Miss Kathryn Bernard, a lyric soprano, and Miss Elizabeth Rogers, pianist, both residents of Trenton, N. J.

The delightful program, as presented by these two gifted young women was inclusive of:

Musetta's Waltz from La Boheme (Puccini). Only a Rose (Friml). Romance (Romberg). Miss Bernard; Waltz in A flat (Brahms). Rustle of Spring (Sinding). Miss Rogers; Michael's Aria from Carmen (Bizet). Moonbeams (Herbert). My Hero (Strauss). Miss Bernard; Prelude (Gershwin). Liebestraume (Liszt). Miss Rogers; Smiling Through (Penn). Love is Where You Find It (Brown). In June (Rogers). Miranda (Hageman). Miss Bernard.

Mrs. George B. Hood projected motion pictures, in color, of many gardens in the Bristol area, in other communities nearby, and also of the trip to greenhouses at Hightstown, N. J., a few weeks ago, participated in by club members.

Art work of Delhaas Jr. high school pupils was on display, this collection including pastels, pencil sketches, water colors, designs and block printing. These were hung by Mrs. Russell W. DeLong, club chairman of fine arts department.

The club president, Mrs. Frank S. Welk, announced forthcoming events for the club. Prayer for peace was offered by Mrs. George E. Boswell.

Freeding at the tea table were Mrs. Ernest Lawrence, Jr., and Mrs. Oscar E. Norbeck.

FLOOD PROTECTION

NEW YORK — (INS) — Steel and concrete mattresses that are now protecting the banks of the Mississippi River, against erosion may be a key to the prevention of flood disasters such as those that recently ravaged Great Britain and the Low Countries. The fight to keep the lower Mississippi from chewing away too much real estate during flood season has resulted in some of the most unusual river control techniques the world has ever seen, according to Steelways, magazine of American Iron and Steel Institute.

Protests Air Cut

GENERAL Hoyt S. Vandenberg, retiring Chief of Staff of the Air Force, peers over the rim of his eyeglasses as he testifies before a Senate Military Appropriations subcommittee in Washington regarding the Administration's five-billion-dollar cut in air power funds. He charged the Joint Chiefs did not participate in drafting the revised defense budget and said they had no idea of its effects until ten days after it was approved.

than any other similar areas in the world, according to the bureau.

In the Easton-Allentown-Bethlehem labor market, an estimated 2,500 high school and college graduates should have little difficulty securing employment. The bureau said clerical, service and sales workers are needed immediately while many technical positions are waiting for skilled and apprentice persons.

In Harrisburg, many of the 2,000 graduates will land jobs in construction, railroads and non-manufacturing industries. The bureau reported approximately 1,650 persons are needed to bring employment up to the required strength in the area.

At Scranton, job opportunities for graduates are good for applicants with abilities to match job requirements. Openings exist for clerks, stenographers, shipping clerks, bookkeepers, salesmen, machinists and power machine operators in textile and shoe industries.

In Erie there should be numerous openings for high school graduates. A heavy demand exists for draftsmen, typists, stenographers, welders, tool makers and machine tool operators, according to the bureau.

In the Greater Pittsburgh Area, about 5,000 graduates will find employment in about 200 different occupations.

At the Johnstown labor market, the job opportunities range from "fair to good" the bureau reports. Employers need about 2,900 persons to fill vacancies. About 1,700 graduates are expected to find employment in steel plants with others going into retail trade and the service industries.

No Trick to Sell Ice Boxes To Eskimos; Done Each Day

But in places like Fairbanks, Alaska, where temperatures dip to 60 degrees below zero, a freezer is needed to "warm" the food to proper temperature—zero to 20 below. Today's Quiet Moment

Assistant Rector of
Cornwells Heights, Penna.

These words from the Sacristy Manual were heard by many married couples on their wedding day. They may be of interest to other old, new and future husbands and wives.

"My dear friends: You are about to enter into a union which is most sacred and most serious. It is most sacred, because established by God Himself; most serious, because it will bind you together for life in a relationship so close and so intimate, that it will profoundly influence your future. That future, with its hopes and disappointments, its successes and its failures, its pleasures and its pains, its joys and its sorrows, is hidden from your eyes. You know these elements are mingled in every life, and are to be expected in your own. And so not knowing what is before you, you take each other for better or for worse, for richer or for poorer, in sickness or in health, until death.

"Truly, then, these words are most serious. It is a beautiful tribute to your undoubted faith in each other, that recognizing their full import, you are nevertheless, so willingly and ready to pronounce them. And because these words involve such solemn obligations, it is most fitting that you rest the security of your wedded life upon the great principle of self-sacrifice. And so you begin your married life by the voluntary and complete surrender of your individual lives in the interest of that deeper and wider life which you are to have in common. Henceforth you belong entirely to each other; you will be of one mind, one in heart, and one in affections. And whatever sacrifices you may hereafter be required to make to preserve this common life, always make them generously.

Sacrifice is usually difficult and irksome. Only love can make it easy and perfect love can make it a joy. We are willing to give in proportion as we love. And when love is perfect the sacrifice is complete. God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son; and the Son so loved us that He gave Himself for our salvation. "Greater love than this no man hath, that a man lay down his life for his friends."

"No greater blessing can come to your married life than pure conjugal love, loyal and true to the end. May, then, this love with which you join your hands and hearts today, never fail, but grow deeper and stronger as the years go on. And if true love and the unselfish spirit of perfect sacrifice guide your every action, you can expect the greatest measure of earthly happiness that may be allotted to man in this vale of tears. The rest is in the hands of God. Nor will He will pledge you the life-long support of His graces in the Holy Sacrament which you are now going to receive."

Clarence F. Comisky, of 39 Tulip lane, was football captain and tackle at Scranton Technical High School, and later won state recognition as guard on the Villanova College squad. More recently, he played amateur football in Scranton before moving here April 15 with his wife, Audrey, and Greg, their 14-month-old son.

Mrs. Comisky, also an athlete, used to participate in swimming meets in Scranton, and was swimming instructor in a camp in the Pocono mountains.

Mr. Comisky served in the Navy at the close of World War II, and attended the University of Scranton. His wife studied in Mary Wood College, Scranton. He is employed at the Fairless U. S. Steel Works, as bricklayer in the maintenance department.

Emilie Methodist Church Holds Varied Meeting

EMILIE, June 6 — At a lengthy session of the official board of Emilie Methodist Church held Wednesday evening in the church, a variety of discussion took place.

The newly-appointed pastor, the Rev. L. Thomas Moore, presided. Approximately 27 attended. The pastor conducted a devotional period prior to the meeting, reading from St. Mark 5; also from Dr. Newton's interpretation of "Everyday Religion".

Secretary and treasurer's reports were made.

It was decided to change various committees, now serving, to the following Commissions: (1) Commission on membership and evangelism; (2) Commission on education; (3) Commission on finance.

Edward Lindemann, Stephen Jadlocki, James Mershon and Mrs. Arthur Williams were elected to serve as a finance committee. Others on this committee are Mrs. William Lovett, George Baker and the pastor. The resignation of Willis Wink as a member of that committee was accepted.

The trustee treasury account, it was decided, will be absorbed in the general church treasury.

It was announced that Emilie will be hostess to a group of interdenominational census takers at Levittown, the evening of June 12. Refreshments will be served. It was decided to order 50 admission tickets to a Convocation at Franklin Field, Phila., the afternoon of June 28. James Harris, Sr. is to secure information concerning the rental of a bus for Emilie group that day.

Decision was made to have calendar bulletins each Sunday for services.

The meeting night was changed to the first Monday evening after the first Sunday of each month. The pastor is to have one month's vacation at his discretion.

Falls Twp. Recreation Baseball League Opens First Season Monday

The Falls twp. Recreation Baseball League will open its first season Monday with games in Fallsington and Levittown at 6:30 p. m.

The Fallsington nine will entertain Yardley at Fallsington School athletic field. In Levittown, the Levittown Teen-agers will face Morrisville on Penn Valley field in the new development. Tuesday night, Levittown will play Fairless Hills in Fallsington.

The league will also inaugurate a new idea to the Lower Bucks area insofar as baseball is concerned. While the league has been formed principally for recreation and general fun, strict rules of baseball will be observed. Regular trained officials will be assigned to each game.

Part of the "new idea" is the innovation of having no roster. Teams are not restricted as to playing personnel except to the extent that all players must reside in the team's area. For instance any resident of Morrisville Borough is eligible to play for the Morrisville team. There is no requirement as to uniforms. A player may dress as he pleases.

Another innovation is the fact that the managers of the teams have not been required to attend a single meeting for planning the league or in adopting rules. Managers of baseball teams are well acquainted with the long discussions involved in the annual formation of their leagues. All game equipment is furnished by the Recreation Council. All officials are furnished by the league.

It is the hope of the Recreation Council that with so little expense to the teams involved and so little attention to details required that the men of the area may be enabled to play a season of baseball and really enjoy it. Player rosters, uniforms, equipment, officials, and the usual expense of running a baseball team, which generally provide the headaches for baseball operators have been avoided in this league. Such an experiment will be carefully observed by baseball enthusiasts who will want to see whether men will really play the game under such a system.

The Falls Township Recreation Council is jointly sponsored by the Falls Township School Board and the Falls Township Supervisors. The Recreation Council is composed of five members. James P. Doherty, Fallsington, Pa., is chairman of the council. Mrs. Carolyn Edwards of Fairless Hills is Secretary. The remaining members of this live wire group are John Thomas, 20 Palm lane, Levittown; Rocco DiRosa, R. D. No. 1, Morrisville, Pa., and Frank Krapp, 807 N. Lafayette st., Morrisville. All members of the council are residents of Falls Township.

The Recreation Council is also sponsoring softball leagues for men and for women. A major project of the group is the four summer playgrounds provided in the Falls Township area. The playgrounds will formally open on Monday, June 29, and will cover a period of eight weeks. Trained supervisors will have charge of the playgrounds which will provide recreation for children and adults of Falls Township.

Lr. Bucks Baseball League Plans Wednesday Meeting

Four teams have indicated that it will join the league which is expected to start the latter part of the month. Any team wishing to join may do so by coming to the meeting. The officials are planning on an eight or six team circuit.

Methodists Arranging For World Convocation

Methodists of Phila. and surrounding communities will begin final preparations June 7th for the coming World Methodist Convocation of Evangelism to be held at Convention Hall, St. George's Church and Franklin Field, Phila., June 26, 27 and 28. This Sunday, June 7, will be "Registration Day" as Methodists in Phila., Delaware, New Jersey and Pennsylvania conferences are given opportunity to register and be a part of this historic event taking place so near to them.

One of the features of the World Convocation program will be a service commemorating the 250th anniversary of the birthday of John Wesley, founder of the Methodist church. To be held in Franklin Field Sunday afternoon, June 28, the occasion promises to be the largest gathering of Methodists in the history of the church. An attendance of over 60,000 is expected. Bishop Fred P. Corson, Phila., will preside and Dr. Maldwyn Edwards, pastor of Central Hall, Birmingham, England, will be the speaker.

Previous to that day, 5,000 Methodists from across the nation will gather for a two-day meeting at Convention Hall. World Leaders of the Methodist church from the United States and England are scheduled to speak.

The Convocation will officially launch the World Mission of Evangelism being carried out by all branches of the Methodist church around the world. The goal of the Methodist Church in America is to deepen the spiritual life of all its members and to win 250,000 new members by profession of faith by the end of 1953.

Helicopter Pilots Need More Hands Than Organist

WASHINGTON, (INS) — Pilots of helicopters, which are playing a vital part in the evacuation of Allied wounded from Korean battlefields and prisoner-of-war exchange camps, sometimes wish nature had given them more hands. The man flying a "whirlybird" is busy as an organist at his console, says the National Geographic Society. He has two controls in his left hand, a third in his right, and a pair of pedals keeping both feet occupied. A crowded instrument panel is his music sheet.

There is as yet no automatic pilot for helicopters. Flying the rotary-winged ships calls for constant coordination of the multiple controls, plus complete awareness of what is going on outside the bubble cockpit.

QUANTITY SERVING WITH CANNED HAM

Church supper, family reunion or any time when you have a group to serve here's one answer to your meat dish—a canned ham topped with a pineapple glaze.

You can plan on 30 to 40 servings from an 8 to 12 pound canned ham, says Reba Staggs, home economist. When you buy the ham here's what to do. Have your retailer slice it into 1/4 to 1/2 inch slices. Then ask him to tie the slices with a string back into its original shape. This way he can place the ham in the container, making it convenient to carry and to store in the refrigerator.

Plan time for heating the ham by allowing 10 to 12 minutes per pound. Place the ham on a rack in an open roasting pan. For the glaze pour 1 small can of crushed pineapple over the meat. Set the oven regulator at 350 degrees F. and keep at this temperature throughout. Baste frequently with the juice.

To serve, place the ham on a large platter and cut the string. Attractively arrange the meat and garnish with spiced crabapples and parsley for a tempting buffet serving. Or if preferred place the slices directly on individual plates.

COOKERY CUES FOR ALL TYPES OF LIVER

Overcooking liver is a frequent mistake of homemakers. Cooking liver too long at a high temperature hardens it and destroys its flavor, points out meat cookery expert Reba Staggs.

Since liver is tender (beef liver is not as tender as the others) it may be cooked by various methods. For instance, all types—beef, pork, veal, lamb—may be cooked by the moist heat method, braising. To braise, dip slices cut about 1/2 inch thick in seasoned flour, then brown them in lard or drippings. Reduce the temperature, cover the frying-pan and cook until tender. This will be about 20 minutes.

Veal and lamb liver are temptingly prepared by broiling. Have liver sliced 1/2 to 3/4 inch thick for cooking by this method. Broil at a moderate temperature—2 inches from heat—for only about 3 minutes on each side.

Frying is another favorite method for cooking liver. Use only a small amount of fat. After liver is well-browned on both sides, turn the temperature down and continue cooking until meat is done. This will require only a short time longer than it takes to brown the meat.

Dry agents seized nine Phila. breweries, Nov. 9, 1923.

QUANTITY SERVING WITH CANNED HAM

Church supper, family reunion or any time when you have a group to serve here's one answer to your meat dish—a canned ham topped with a pineapple glaze.

You can plan on 30 to 40 servings from an 8 to 12 pound canned ham, says Reba Staggs, home economist. When you buy the ham here's what to do. Have your retailer slice it into 1/4 to 1/2 inch slices. Then ask him to tie the slices with a string back into its original shape. This way he can place the ham in the container, making it convenient to carry and to store in the refrigerator.

Plan time for heating the ham by allowing 10 to 12 minutes per pound. Place the ham on a rack in an open roasting pan. For the glaze pour 1 small can of crushed pineapple over the meat. Set the oven regulator at 350 degrees F. and keep at this temperature throughout. Baste frequently with the juice.

To serve, place the ham on a large platter and cut the string. Attractively arrange the meat and garnish with spiced crabapples and parsley for a tempting buffet serving. Or if preferred place the slices directly on individual plates.

COOKERY CUES FOR ALL TYPES OF LIVER

Overcooking liver is a frequent mistake of homemakers. Cooking liver too long at a high temperature hardens it and destroys its flavor, points out meat cookery expert Reba Staggs.

Since liver is tender (beef liver is not as tender as the others) it may be cooked by various methods. For instance, all types—beef, pork, veal, lamb—may be cooked by the moist heat method, braising. To braise, dip slices cut about 1/2 inch thick in seasoned flour, then brown them in lard or drippings. Reduce the temperature, cover the frying pan and cook until tender. This will be about 20 minutes.

Veal and lamb liver are temptingly prepared by broiling. Have liver sliced 1/2 to 3/4 inch thick for cooking by this method. Broil at a moderate temperature—2 inches from heat—for only about 3 minutes on each side.

Frying is another favorite method for cooking liver. Use only a small amount of fat. After liver is well-browned on both sides, turn the temperature down and continue cooking until meat is done. This will require only a short time longer than it takes to brown the meat.
